

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR-IN-CHIEF
FALL 2025 ISSUE

THE JOURNAL OF SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT IN AFRICA (JSDA)

My Dear Friends and Colleagues:

It is my distinct pleasure and privilege to bring you the Fall 2025 Issue of the JOURNAL OF SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT IN AFRICA (JSDA). We have been very busy in the past four months working with potential authors and making decisions on publishing a few selected papers that address matters dealing with the sustainable development and sustainability concerns of Africa.

Africa is known for its abundant natural resources and struggling economic development. In the last couple of years, some countries of Africa have shown strong signs of economic growth by renegotiating the prices of their natural resources and putting into place better and effective governmental parastatals. There is a growing recognition, globally, that Africa must be taken seriously in global affairs. The slogan in recent months is "Africa is rising." African scholars are responding by undertaking serious research that informs sustainable development and sustainability of Africa's development projects, projects and policies at the core of positive trajectory towards self-sufficiency and self-containment in the era of globalization.

The articles in this issue of the JSDA are examples of the endeavor by scholars to address matters of Africa's sustainable development and sustainability. A few of the articles in this issue are:

1. AGRICULTURAL ADAPTATION TO CLIMATE CHANGE THREATS IN NORTHERN GHANA: A REVIEW OF THE ISSUES
2. INSTITUTIONALIZED EXCLUSION: AGONIES OF CONFLICT-DISPLACED HOUSEHOLDS IN ETHIOPIA
3. ISSUES IN NIGERIA-RUSSIA RELATIONS AND DEVELOPMENT IN NIGERIA, 1967-2019
4. NIGERIAN CIVIL WAR: LESSONS LEARNT, IMPLICATIONS FOR ITS EXTERNAL RELATIONS

We will be adding more articles to this issue as we finalize decisions about them. We are grateful to our readership for their support.

Sincerely,

Valentine Udo James, Ph.D.; CEI, CAQS
Professor of Environmental Management, Planning and Policy
Certified Environmental Inspector
Certified Air Quality Specialist
Pennsylvania Western University, Clarion Campus

